STAN LEE...

...Executive Publisher, President, and Creative Director of Mighty Marvel called me up from his office out in Los Angeles today. He thought he'd take out a few minutes from being a Hollywood Mogul to check in with me, your large, mincing-looking, ornery-but-beautiful-to-look Editor-in-Chief—just to see how the comics were doing. Well, I was delighted to tell him that the comics are doing great! This is our best year ever!

Needless to say, Stan was thoroughly impressed...but, he said something that made me very proud to know him. He said, "Jim, I love to hear that sales are good, but sometimes good sales can be a short-term fluke — what I really care about is whether or not the comics are good. If the comics are good, sales will take care of themselves." My sentiments exactly! Anyway, since Stan is a little behind in his reading, being that he's busy from time to time and all, I proceeded to tell him all about what's been going on in at our current titles, what's going on now, and all the daring, exciting developments I've got planned. When I finished, he was ecstatic! He said, "Jim, what you've got the works is fantastic! It's the best plotting I've ever heard of—the kind of stuff that makes Marvel number one! I'm absolutely delighted!"

I feel like a million bucks!

WHICH BRINGS UP...

...the rumor of the month. It seems that some strange tales out there have been spreading the word notion that we here at The House of Ideas are planning to make all sorts of drastic, destructive changes, tearing down everything we've built up over the years on a number of our top titles — even killing off a passed of Marvel stars! What bawdiness!

Change, of course, is the essence of what makes the Marvel Universe come alive — and I'll be damned if I'll ever let things stagnate here. There are enough Owl Comics in the world without any Marvel titles slipping back into their ranks. I'm not crazy, though...at least not in a two-destructive way.

A PROBLEM SOLVED!

Since I seem to be having a lot of trouble finding time to take a vacation — or sleep, or eat, or do anything but my job, I recently decided to combine a couple of little vacations with some luck.

Two weeks ago, superstar artist/writer Jim Starlin invited a bunch of us up to his beautiful upstate New York home. Among those present were artist Barry Windsor-Smith and his wife, reporter Michelle Brand, artist Carl Potts, artist/writer Bob Layton, colorist Christie Schaeke, and of course, Jim Starlin and his wife, painter Elaine Grauman. We all played regatta at Jim's club, the Tiger Fitness Center in nearby Kingston, ate a magnificent meal at Rick's, a renowned area restaurant, photographed on Jim's huge lawn, and enjoyed the Adirondack scenery. In between things, I wrote a few memos, answered some important mail, consulted with Jim about his new Dr. Strange series, worked out a deal with Barry to do a cover for an upcoming Dr. Strange Special Edition reprint, and signed Bob to a Spider-Man Graphic Novel contract.

Last week, I met star scripter David Michelinie and ace inkster David Breeding in Atlantic City for two days. We stayed in luxury at Caesar's Regency Hyatt on the Boardwalk, ate in several terrific restaurants, gambled a little, and in general enjoyed the resort facilities. In between things, I wrote a treatment for a possible TV show that I can't tell you about yet, answered some business questions of David's, and worked out an Avengers Graphic Novel plot with Dave.

Now that's how to work!

-- BUT I WILL REMEMBER YOU, THE LONGEST DAY I LIVE,
I WILL NEVER FORGET
EDITH DUNNE.

AND IF I WERE
THE PRAYING KIND...
I'D DO THAT FOR YOU, TOO.

A SHRIEK, THEN A SCREAM OF CONSUMING TERROR--A CITY OF
THE WICKED THAT IS QUICKLY
LOST IN THE DISTANT GURGLE
OF THUNDER AND THE WHISTLE OF A SUDDEN, CHILLING WIND...

NEXT: INTO THE DEVIL'S CRADLE!
